

A tough act to follow!

Hancock Central School District students entertained more than 200 parents, grandparents and community members last Friday to cap a weeklong visit from the National Circus Project. Students in grades K-9 who take advantage of the Hancock Community Education Foundation's free After School Program received a week's worth of training from the NCP before the big show Friday night. The week began with an assembly of entertainment featuring performers from the circus.

The NCP is an arts-in-education group that promotes student participation in school arts and physical education activities, using "circus" as its theme. Students learn and practice physical fitness and motor skills through juggling, plate-spinning, "devil stick" manipulation, and balancing on stilts.

The workshop was partially funded by the Arts Education Grant program, a local re-grant program of the Roxbury Arts Group. These grants are made possible with funds from the Decentralization (DEC) program of the New York State Council on the Arts (NYSCA).
